

Notes

Before I'd even had the chance to listen to a note of this release, I was laughing. I am not fluent in the German language, but two words in the title were obvious: Synchronization and Lemon (Zitrone appeared to be German for citrus, which I guessed to mean lemon). The original cover art (a picture of a lemon tree), and a quick translation proved my translation hunch correct: "Synchronization With A Lemon".

This set an expectation of sweet, fruity and tangy sounds when I listened to the release. This work did not fail to meet those expectations.

But, this release actually proved it had a bit more substance than the title suggested. While the title piece is quite refreshing in its minimal ambience, later pieces proved to have a citrusy twist below their outer skin. In all a refreshing listen with a twist that bears multiple listens.

Also, you will be well rewarded by listening to this release with earbuds or headphones to take in the full flavor of this release.

Biography

Dominic Razlaff (aka DR), born 1982 is an ambient musician from Braunschweig, Germany. Interested in making music since 2007. In the year 2009 he bought his first synthesizer (Novation Xio), that has changed a lot. From this day DR was more interested in sounddesign and it has moved more and more towards ambient music. Currently he produce the most tracks with classic subtractive synthesis and record it on a Fostex X-15, later edited with some granular synthesis tools and field recordings. Uses synthesizers, field recordings, tape loops & granular synthesis to create melancholy, deep, ambient / drone soundscapes.
